GOVERNMENT DECIDES TO DROP PROSECUTION

Representative Heflin Freed From Charge of Assault With Dangerous Weapon.

J. Thomas Heflin, representative in Congress from Alabama, will not be called on to stand trial on an indictment returned against him more than eight years ago, charging an assault with a dangerous weapon. United States Attorney Lasker today, with the approval of Judge Gould of the District Supreme Court, entered a nolle prosequi in Criminal Division I. Mr. Lasker referred the case to the Department of Justice some time ago and recently received directions to drop the prosecution.

Mr. Heflin was a passenger on a car in March, 1908, when he became involved in a verbal altercation with Lewis Lundy, colored, who had made himself obnoxious to a female passenger. Mr. Heflin is said to have drawn a pistol and as Lundy left the car shot at him. Lundy was not struck, but the bullet rebounded from the pavement and struck a passer-by, who developed lockjaw and was treated for some time at a local hospital, finally recovering.

Lundy had a police record of some length, according to the information furnished the Department of Justice by Mr. Lasker, and a rumor has been circulated of his death. The young woman, who was the chief witness for the government, left the United States some years ago and is residing in Europe. It is believed.

Under these conditions, Mr. Lasker thought the case could not be prosecuted successfully and wished to clear the docket of his office.

Mr. Heflin gave bail of $15,000 when the indictment was found against him.
